Key Curriculum Press had another meeting of the Geometer's Sketchpad User Group during the NECC conference. There were several activities going on at the same time. At each table an idea was shared by a group leader who had a Laptop. People then moved from group to group. (CLIME is considering using a similar format for its meeting in Boston next year.)

Brian Harvey (2634 Virginia Street, Berkeley, CA 94709) has developed a sophisticated, but easy to use version of the Logo language to give away free to educators and other interested people. If one is working on the Internet, download the Unix, DOS, or Mac version from ANARRES.CS.BERKELEY.EDU in the directory pub/ucblogo. If you wish to have it sent, specify platform and send $4 to cover costs. (Outside of North America send US $5 for one disk or US $9 for both.)

Al Cuoco, Paul Goldenberg, and June Mark are editing a new-look column in the Mathematics Teacher (NCTM publication) entitled Technology Tips. The department is devoted to providing a forum where teachers can discuss issues related to the use of technology in the mathematics class. Tips for using technology, classroom activities, and ideas related to teaching and learning mathematics with technology are all appropriate. Please send tips by e-mail to TECHTIPS@EDC.ORG or write to Al Cuoco, EDC, 55 Chapel Street, Newton, MA 02158. □

I realize that this is somewhat of a departure from what we have done in the past. And some of you may object to the direction we are taking. But keep in mind that our commitment is not just to Logo, but also to the "heading" that Seymour Papert set for us in Mindstorms and continued in the Children's Machine.

Please mark on your calendar the time of our next CLIME meeting which will take place on April 6th, 1995 in Boston during the annual NCTM meeting. We will have a new workshop format where we will be sharing many interesting approaches to teaching and learning mathematics using a variety of tools. Details will be in our annual CLIME meeting preview issue which will be out next March. We hope to see you there!
